

Title: H. pylori infection: Lessons from the Past and directions for the Future

Peter Malfertheiner

LMU Universitätsklinikum, Med. Klinik II, Munich, Germany

Professor of Medicine

Chairman of the Department of Gastroenterology, Hepatology and Infectious Diseases at the Otto v. Guericke University of Magdeburg in Germany, from 1995 until 2017.

Since January 2018 Senior Professor at the LMU, Medical Clinic University in Munich, where he leads clinical and translational research projects related to H.pylori and Gut Microbiota..

Chairman of the United European Gastroenterology Federation (UEG) 2004

President of the UEGW 2006 ,Chairman of Education Committee of UEG. 2007-2008

President of the German Society of Gastroenterology in 2011.

He has received many international awards (honorary memberships, academy of science, doctorates honoris causae, Turgu Mures, Athens,, Budapest, Cluj Napoca Vilnius,)

2019 awarded with life time achievement of the United European Gastroenterology (UEG.)

Editor of Digestive Diseases, and member in Editorial Boards of several other international peer review journals.

Director of Postgraduate Courses of the European Association of Gastroenterology and Endoscopy (EAGEN).

His main research fields are Helicobacter pylori infection and related diseases, chronic inflammation and carcinogenesis, gastric cancer, gastric -and gut microbiome, hepatocellular cancer, gastroesophageal reflux disease (GERD) and acid related disorders.

Publications in peer reviewed journals (pub med) >1180 (HI 110)